Employee Resource Groups raise funds for natural disaster victims in South Asia

In the wake of a recent series of earthquakes, tsunamis and a typhoon that impacted South Asia, PG&E employees banded together to raise $5,000 to assist with disaster relief efforts.

The fundraising drive began when members of the Black Employees Association joined efforts to raise $2,000 to support victims of three tsunamis, triggered by earthquakes, which devastated Samoa in late September.

The donation was sent to the region through Soul'd Out Christian Center International (SOCCI) in South San Francisco.

Additionally, members of the Filipino Employees Association (FEA) united to support the victims of Typhoon Ketsana, a powerful September storm that displaced millions of residents in the Philippines. The group recently presented a check for $3,000 to the Ayala Foundation's Disaster Relief Fund.

The Hispanic Employees Association and Asian Employees Association also assisted with both relief efforts by encouraging their members to donate funds.

The Arc honors PG&E

Nonprofit names company Employer of the Year

PG&E was named the 2009 Employer of the Year by The Arc of San Francisco, a nonprofit founded by parents of children with intellectual and other developmental disabilities. The organization serves a diverse group of more than 550 clients with the common goal of giving them the opportunity to work, live and socialize in our community with the support they need to be safe and independent.

The Arc's Business Advisory Council (BAC) established the annual WorkLife Awards "to honor the work and life achievements of employees with developmental disabilities and acknowledge organizations for their contributions and exceptional commitment to promote employment services for Arc clients in the San Francisco Bay Area".

PG&E's relationship with The Arc began early last year, when several employees participated in a cycling event sponsored by the Best Buddy Program, a nonprofit organization dedicated to creating work opportunities for those with developmental and intellectual disabilities. The experience motivated the PG&E participants to build a relationship with The Arc of San Francisco, which works with Bay Area employers to place its clients, fostering workforce diversity.

Vince Manfreda, an 8-year employee from the CARE Program, accepted the award on behalf of PG&E. As a mentor to Matt Warren, who was hired as a contractor through The Arc, Manfreda spoke about Warren's dedicated work ethic and how he has helped his CARE Program teammates reflect on our value of respecting each other's diversity and honoring our unique traits.

Tim Hornbecker, CEO of The Arc of San Francisco, highlighted the importance of his organization's service to the community and how integral employers are to the program's success.

PG&E named the 'Best of the Best' by national publications

Also one of 'Top 100 Military Friendly Employers'

PG&E has two more honors to add to our growing list of diversity and inclusion recognition. First, Olive Tree Publishing, Inc., publishers of the Black EOE Journal, Hispanic Network Magazine and Professional Woman's Magazine, has selected PG&E as a 2009 "Best of the Best" winner. The annual evaluation honors companies that provide the best career opportunities for minorities.

PG&E was recognized in the following categories: Top Energy, Oil and Utility Company; Top Supplier Diversity Program; and Top Diversity Employer for African-Americans, Hispanics and Women.

The magazine issues are available as follows:

Black EOE Journal* "2009 Annual Yearbook"
(Circulation: October 2009 through January 2010)

Hispanic Network Magazine*
"2009 Best of the Best"
(Circulation: November 2009 through February 2010)

Professional Woman's Magazine*
"2009 Best of the Best"
(Circulation: December 2009 through March 2010)

"This recognition concludes what's been a phenomenal year for our diversity and inclusion efforts at PG&E."

Top Military Friendly Employer

Additionally, G.I. Jobs magazine ranked PG&E as number 82 on its 2010 "Top 100 Military Friendly Employer" list. The rankings are based on a survey which assesses a company's long-term commitment to hiring former military, recruiting and hiring efforts and results, policies for Reserve/Guard members called to active duty and the presence of special recruitment military programs.

Of the 5,000 companies eligible (minimum of $500 million in annual revenues), only 2 percent made the list.

"These are quite tremendous honors," remarked Bill Harper, vice president and chief diversity officer. "This recognition concludes what's been a phenomenal year for our diversity and inclusion efforts at PG&E."
